

Neither Admit Nor Deny:

Corporate Crime in the Age of Deferred Prosecutions, Consent Decrees, Whistleblowers & Monitors

May 3, 2013 National Press Club, Washington, D.C.

Sponsored by Corporate Crime Reporter.
Subscribers to Corporate Crime Reporter: $395.00 Non-subscribers: $495.00.

To reserve your seats, call 202.468.8868.
Or e-mail: russellmokhiber@gmail.com.
Space limited, 80 capacity.

8:15 am Opening Remarks by Russell Mokhiber, Editor, Corporate Crime Reporter

8:30 am to 10:00 am

Panel One

SEC Whistleblower Cases

Some predict that SEC whistleblower cases will grow to rival those brought under the False Claims Act. Only time will tell. But the buzz around the SEC's whistleblower program is growing. And all signs are that whistleblowers will turbocharge the SEC's enforcement program. Will the SEC whistleblower program get the job done?

Stephen Cohen, Associate Director, SEC Division of Enforcement
Neil Getnick, Getnick & Getnick
Jordan Thomas, Labaton Sucharow
Linda Chatman Thomsen, Davis Polk Wardwell
Lawrence West, Latham & Watkins

10:15 am to 11:45 am

Panel Two

Deferred and Non-Prosecution Agreements

Twenty years ago, the Justice Department settled its major corporate crime investigations with guilty pleas. Now, for the most part, major corporate crime cases are settled with deferred and non prosecution agreements. Critics now say that the Department ought to drop its practice of relying on deferred and non prosecution agreements. If the government doesn't have the evidence or resources to bring the case to trial or to force a guilty plea, it ought to just not bring the case.

Anthony Barkow, Jenner & Block
Steven Fagell, Covington
Kathleen Harris, Arnold & Porter (UK)
Mike Koehler, Southern Illinois School of Law
Denis McInerney, Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice
David Uhlmann, University of Michigan Law School

12 noon to 1 pm: Luncheon Keynote Speaker—Mythili Raman, Acting Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, Department of Justice

1:15 pm to 2:45 pm

Panel Three

SEC Consent Decrees

The SEC practice of settling major corporate cases with "neither admit nor deny" consent decrees has triggered the ire of a number of federal judges. They argue that if the SEC has the evidence to bring a case and secure remedies, it ought to force the companies to admit to wrongdoing. Should the SEC modify its consent decree practice—and if so, how?

John Coffee, Columbia Law School
George Canellos, Deputy Director, SEC Enforcement Division
Thomas Hanusik, Crowell & Moring
Mei Lin Kwan-Gett, Willkie Farr & Gallagher
William McLucas, Wilmer Hale

3:00 pm to 4:30 pm

Panel Four

Corporate Monitors

In settling corporate crime cases, the Department of Justice may require that the company agree to the appointment of a monitor. Under what circumstances should a monitor be appointed? Who should select the monitor? What should be the scope of the monitor's duties and how long should the monitorship last? How should the monitor be paid? What steps should the monitor take to change the corporate culture that resulted in the commission of crimes?

John Buretta, Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff, Criminal Division, Department of Justice
Shirah Neiman, SN Compliance LLC
Dan Newcomb, Shearman & Sterling
George Stamboulidis, Baker Hostetler
Gil Soffer, Katten Muchin
F. Joseph Warin, Gibson Dunn

4:30 pm: Closing Remarks

Application for CLE accreditation pending.